Clerk Just A Year Ago; Now U. S. Youth Wears the Cross of Honor

"I heard a call for help."

Raymond Guyette, a soft-spoken clerk who a year or so ago was a clerk in the American Brass Company's plant at Waterbury, Conn., but now is a corporal and a Croix de Guerre man, got his medal in a little episode that was a thriller. He said: "Orders came to capture two German prisoners from a certain sector near the Yser canal and the Chemin des Dames on March 18, and thirty-five of us, Yanks, with 110 Frenchmen, volunteered. Twelve American officers from the 101st went out. 'No Man's Land' ahead of us in the darkness, with pontoon bridges had been thrown across the canal. The German trenches were on the other side of it. "Our zero hour was 5:15 a. m. Our barrage started at that time, but it developed that our French guides had led us too far by a couple hundred yards, and we found ourselves right in the midst of our own artillery fire. "Of the twelve engineers five were killed at once and the other seven were wounded. To make matters worse, the Germans put up a barrage, behind which their infantry advanced upon us. Shells were flying everywhere—our own and Fritz's, and rifles and machine guns were blazing merrily away too. "There were a good many gas shells mixed up in the German firing, and a lot of our boys got light doses of the poisonous stuff. Thirteen of us Americans and I don't know how many Frenchmen were wounded—and we didn't have a chance to grab our prisoners, though you bet we got some litter. "As I was starting back toward our lines, which were about 300 yards from the canal, I heard a call for help, and one of the wounded engineers waved his hand at me. I couldn't let him lay there so I went back and slung him over my shoulder. As I was picking him up I saw there were other wounded men lying close by. "When I got the first fellow back, I was pretty tired, but thought I could manage another. So I got a second and lugged him across. 'No Man's Land' felt as if I was all in, but I gave it another try and got a third one across. "All this time, it must be remembered, there was constant heavy firing from the German lines, but young Guyette escaped without injury.

COUNTY AGENTS WILL HOLD MEETING HERE

Southern Wisconsin Agents and Emergency Food Agents Will Hold Meeting in This City Thursday—L. K. Hatch Will Speak.

About twenty county agents and emergency food agents from Southern Wisconsin will hold their semi-annual meeting in this city on Thursday. The meeting will open at eight-thirty o'clock and will last through the entire day. These meetings are held twice a year in order to enable the agents to get together and discuss their plans for their work. It is the idea of the agents to map out their work in such a way as they will all be doing practically the same work at the same time. During these times there is a great demand for work by county agents and their meeting on Thursday will be held to discuss the work that is to be done this summer and fall.

Several fine speakers have been secured to address the meeting and the farmers and members of the County Council of Drones are urged to attend the meetings. All agriculture problems which may be of interest to the farmers will be taken up at the meeting.

L. K. Hatch, who is well known throughout the country as a man well versed in farming methods, will give the main address of the meeting. Mr. Hatch has recently returned from Washington where he has been attending a conference and brings a message of vital importance to the agents and farmers of this state.

J. B. Borden, also a well known authority on agriculture matters, has been secured to give an address before the meeting.

Mr. L. F. Graber is the third speaker on the program and he will talk to the audience on the planting of catch crops this season. Mr. Graber is well versed in these matters and his talk should prove very instructive as well as interesting.

Whitewater News

Whitewater, May 14.—The City Federation of Women's Clubs held its meeting at the firemen's rooms in the city hall yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Colony, president of the first district, gave an address.

F. H. Kiser has been spending a few days in Milwaukee. The homing pigeons that were liberated at the White House store last week arrived in Kenosha in two hours and forty-five minutes. "The birds were sent here by Miss Grace Thomas, a niece of Mrs. Maude Williams.

Mrs. L. J. Stephens was a visitor at Beloit Monday. Mr. and Mrs. C. Taylor of Delavan were visitors here yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Stephens.

Judge Maxfield of Janesville was visitor the last of the week at the L. J. Stephens home.

Mrs. E. S. Peterson and son, Harold, of Chicago, were guests last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Olsen. John R. Johnson is spending today in Milwaukee.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Rogers of Oshkosh are visiting at Captain J. O. Green's.

The flag pole in the city park is to be removed to the library park and a new flag has been ordered. Charles Sprackling has been appointed a member of the board of water commissioners.

Sidney White, youngest son of Mrs. Dora White, of Santa Monica, Cal., has recently been graduated lieutenant from Camp Funston, in Kansas.

TENNIS CLUB WILL BE ORGANIZED SOON

C. R. Bearmore Making Plans for a Determined Start of Club This Season—Wants All Players to Report.

Plans for the organization of a strong Y. M. C. A. tennis club are under way, according to Mr. Bearmore, who stated this morning that he would like to have the names of all persons, members or non-members, who wish to play tennis this season. He made especial emphasis on the importance of leaving their names with several strong teams, and at the same time those who become charter members will have the benefit of a reduced rate.

A strong club is desired by Mr. Bearmore as this will materially lessen the expense and consequently the fees will be smaller for each member. All persons who wish to join the tennis club should leave their names with Mr. Bearmore and when a satisfactory number of members have joined a meeting will be held to make arrangements for the games. It is thought that this will be in the near future as many persons have already signified their intention of joining.

Reducing the rates of the charter members of the tennis club was decided upon, due to the fact that in former years the players have joined in small numbers and it took a considerable length of time before the club gained headway. This time Mr. Bearmore plans to have the club start strong. He made special emphasis on the point of having all interested persons, whether good players or only novices, join now, and get into the game.

County Is Defendant. Appleton, Wis., May.—The county of Outagamie has just been made defendant in a $15,000 damage suit, the papers of which were filed with the county clerk. The action is brought by Fred Pinke, administrator of his wife, Mathilda Pinke, who met death near Rohan's hill on the Kaukauna-Ashkerton road July 29, 1917, while driving along an embankment at night, which was not sufficiently protected. The county board was notified of the claim made and turned the matter over to the state road and bridge committee and the district attorney with power to act.

Minnesota Druggist Praises Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

THE FITTEST.

This question of a place in the Sun and other problems which the Germans have brought to the fore, and who are the fittest, brings forth much discussion. The Wall Street Journal takes it up in the following manner by saying that, "divine a German could say, 'I am the fittest' and that Germany, German newspapers at hand are now promulgating through the mouths of professors what they call the 'survival of the fittest'." The ethnological argument which ascribed German origin to Dante, Shakespeare and Michelangelo is now being used to justify the German war effort. But the biological argument is again brought forward; it is said that it is the law of the jungle that the fittest shall survive.

There is no such law, and certainly Darwin never said so. His idea of fitness included not merely strength, but intelligence. It is entirely probable that the colored people who chaptered the White House furnace are fitter than President Wilson. But no one will allege that his survival would be that of the fittest.

It is one of the weakest things of German materialism, which has discarded all considerations of a spiritual and moral character. These words in the war sense. These words do not mean the survival of the fittest. They mean the survival of the physically strongest. Every advance in civilization throughout the ages has been the result of resistance to this doctrine. If the strongest only were to survive the soldier who blew out Edith Cavell's good would be the more desirable citizen.

When the world talks of the survival of the fittest it means exactly what "Christianity means—it means the raising of man above the brute, where fitness is measured in intellectual, moral and spiritual qualities and not in sheer force, which must always be the servant of intellect. The German professors prove too much. They read themselves back into the category of the brute, and it is no injustice to say the German system of education has done exactly this thing with the German people.

Civilization will always judge fitness by its service to humanity. Mere strength and rapacity do not count. The strongest which the German professors believe should survive at the expense of all that is noble and pure in mankind, can be replaced by the machinery devised by those who are truly fit. Is the truckman who carries a case into Edison's laboratory a fitter survivor than Edison?

It is a tremendous task, but one thing is certain if the world is to be made safe for enlightened people to live in. This is that the whole German people must be re-educated out of their ideas of feudalism and force, and that there must be added to their mechanical mind a soul.

THE WAR AND LABOR.

The workers must compass their differences during the war, and not strike or enter any movement that would make them ashamed to look our soldiers in the face when they bring victory back from the present war. Either give Uncle Sam what you have in bonds, taxes, and services, or you will ultimately pay for it with an indemnity to the Kaiser.

The tolerance of the war was not made by any capitalist seeking labor support for the war. It was Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address at Boston last week.

Early in the war, the idea was sedulously fomented by German agents, that this was a rich man's war, promoted by the munition-makers. Many honest people believed and repeated this lie.

It should be perfectly evident that no workingman is safe in this country or any other until the Kaiser's despotism is destroyed. That autocrat realizes perfectly that his system is out of date. He must either destroy it or be destroyed by it.

He has chosen the former alternative. He has chosen the path of unsuspicious nations first before they were ready, and by long advance preparation, he could gain such an advantage that the democratic nations could never catch up with him.

JACKSON STREET BRIDGE.

On various occasions in the past the question of constructing a new bridge or making extensive repairs on the old one, at Jackson street, have been subjects of discussion. Temporary repairs have been made until the present time when it appears that a new bridge is imperative to the best interests of the city or such extensive repairs on the present structure that would mean a waste of several thousand dollars in the end are essential. At present the bridge is closed for traffic and works a hardship on hundreds of persons who have used it in the past. Now the question is up for consideration again and the council will take some definite action. They can order the repairs or they can decide to hold a special election to see whether the city should be bonded for a sum sufficient to construct a new bridge. This could be done at a special election called expressly for this purpose. Just what will be done remains to be seen for it is up to the council, and certainly they must do something. The question of a new bridge at this time, however, brings up another problem. These are war times and even if it is decided to construct a bridge, can the material be obtained and will the government permit its use. These are questions to be discussed and understood, but it is safe to say that all sides will be considered by the council committee and the action deemed wisest under existing conditions decided upon. Meanwhile, the bridge is closed and the public suffers.

It is easy enough to get one thousand railroad locomotives ordered now when they are paid for out of taxes, but you couldn't get any when they were to be had only by allowing the railroads to make a profit.

Some of the people who wonder why the government does not shoot the spies, will pass along to their neighbors those fake stories about the war that some one put into their unsuspecting ears with a purpose.

It is surprising how quickly the Germans wanted to give up the use of poisonous gases for humanitarian reasons, when they discovered that the prevailing winds in France blow toward Germany.

These useless boys that a few years ago had nothing to do but stand on street corners, are the same ones who have been out in their school uniforms selling many million dollars worth of Liberty bonds.

There are a good many men who couldn't possibly stop and help the women get out surgical dressings, as it takes them every evening to read about the war and argue how it should run.

Some of our people have been so busy lamenting the laggardness of the government in war preparation, that they overlooked the need for buying a Liberty bond.

While the American people were hollering over the big things they were going to do, the Kaiser's war machine went ahead and did a lot of them.

A popular method of observing Clean-up week, is to get out rubbish on a windy day when waste paper will blow over the neighborhood.

It is gradually dawning on the German people that the Americans in France are not parties of tourists sent over to inspect the ruins.

So far none of the men who kick on working up heavy sod into a garden have asked to go to France and dig trenches under fire.

Germany is now polishing up a large, handsomely decorated, and very shiny gold brick in the form of a peace offer.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

BY E. MOUTON

A LITTLE SLICE OF LIFE.
The other day our little boy was very

He said he felt queer all over, and, of course,

We were very much excited.

He had a temperature and a bad cough.

We hastened to the telephone and told the doctor to come over at once.

The doctor had a long way to come, but he arrived in half an hour out of breath.

After he arrived we took him into the little boy's bed room.

But the little boy wasn't there.

We looked for him high and low.

While the doctor waited and gnawed his mustache and scowled.

Finally we found the boy over on the common.

Two blocks from the house.

Behind a large pile of rocks, and he was playing "kitt the kaiser" by throwing rocks at a war map.

He was having the time of his life. And when we left him home by the car.

The doctor said there was nothing the matter with him.

There is always something to learn about kids.

One of them is that they all enjoy poor health. They can be very ill one minute and throwing stones at the kaiser the next.

Out West they dumped a German sympathizer in a large doughbin in a bakery.

But why spoil a lot of perfectly good dough?

NO MATTER HOW HUMBLE, THERE IS NO SENSATION LIKE THAT WHICH COMES WITH THE OWNERSHIP OF A LIBERTY BOND.

MORE CANNIBALISM.
They say the Huns are now eating dogs.

The latest war song:
"Bouncing a Bomb on Von Hindenburg's Head."

The song goes to illustrate the entire uselessness of this particular form of human endeavor.

WAR GARDENING.
If it takes six months to train a soldier, we are of the opinion it takes about six years to train a war garden or to be more exact, a war garden is soldiering is a science; war gardening is an exact science.

Out in our neighborhood a company owns a lot of land and lets it go to the huns or amateur gardeners for just enough to pay the water bill. The gardens are twenty to fifty feet in size.

Last year our next-door neighbor planted what he thought were beans and got vegetable oysters. Another went in for turnips and got potatoes. A third decided to mix all seeds and plant the huns together so he couldn't possibly lose. He never found out what he did get for just as his delightful mixture was ready for harvest somebody came along and did his harvesting for him.

For Burning Eczema
Greasy salves and ointments should not be applied if good clear skin is wanted. From any drugstore for 25c, or $1.00 for large size, get a bottle of Eczema. When applied as directed it effectively removes eczema, quickly stops itching, and heals skin troubles, also sores, burns, wounds and chafing. It penetrates, cleanses and soothes. It is a clean, dependable and inexpensive antiseptic liquid. Try it, as we believe nothing you have ever used as effective and satisfying.

The E. W. Rose Co., Cleveland, O.

This year all these boys know more about gardening than they did last year, but each year brings on a new crop of gardeners.

It might be well to mix veteran gardeners with the amateur, the same as they mix seasoned campaigners with the green troops over in France.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.
THE BURDEN BEARER.
Oh, my shoulders grow weary of the burdens I am bearing.

An I grumble when I'm footsore at the rough road I am farin.
But I strap my knapsack tighter till I feel the leather bind me.

An I'm glad to bear the burdens for the ones who come behind me.
It's for them that I am plodding, for the children come after.

I would strew their path with roses and would fill their days with laughter.
Oh, there's selfishness within me, there are times it gets to talking.

Times I hear it whisper to me, "It's a dusty road you're wakin'."
Why not rest your feet a little? Why not pause and take your leisure?

Don't you hunger in your striving for the merry whirl of pleasure?
Then I turn and see them smiling, and I grip my burdens tighter.

For the joy that I am seeking is to see their eyes grow brighter.
Oh, I've sipped the cup of sorrow and I've felt the gulf of trouble.

An I know the hurt of tragedy through a field of o'er run with stubble.
But a rougher road to travel had my father gone before me.

An I'm glad to bear the burdens for the ones that follow after.
Oh, my kindly father never gave himself a year of leisure.

Never lived a selfish moment, never turned his back on pleasure.
Though he must have grown weary of the burdens he was bearing.

He was trying hard to better every road I'd soon be in.
Now I turn and see them smiling, and I hear their merry laughter.

An I'm glad to bear the burdens for the ones that follow after.
Who's Who In Today's News

J. D. P. FRENCH.
John Denton Pinkstone French—that is the full name of the new Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

We know him better perhaps as Field Marshal French, commander of the British expeditionary forces sent to France during 1914-15.

His selection as controller of the affairs of Ireland recently was the natural thing for the British government to do since he had been there in charge of the military forces two years ago during the Dublin riots and understood the situation of the country.

What experience he had then will serve him now when there are riots growing out of the opposition of the Irish to the new conscription law.

French is viccount of Press and who described the war was born at Kent sixty-five years ago and although he has made his name as a military leader his father was a naval officer and French himself was educated as a naval cadet and first served England on the sea. He was a midshipman on the Britannia.

In South Africa and the Sudan in 1874 he served as a cavalryman with the Eighth Hussars. He headed an army corps in 1901 and in 1912 was made field marshal. When he led the British forces to France he led the British forces to France he was made chief of the imperial general staff. In 1916 he was brought back to England as commander in chief of the home forces.

MRS. HARVEY GAVE ADDRESS BEFORE FORTNIGHTLY CLUB

President of State Federation of Women Gives Interesting Talk at Milton Junction.

An event of considerable importance to local clubwomen occurred yesterday when the president of the State Federation, Mrs. L. D. Harvey, gave an address before the Fortnightly club at Milton Junction.

She was on her way home after attending the great national convention of women held during the last ten days at Hot Springs, Arkansas, and her talk was a general impression of the facts received by her during these meetings.

As far as the background of the convention was concerned, she said that she never knew it to be better managed. The city is called "the City of Hotels," and had ample accommodations for everyone. Although the convention hall was two miles away from the headquarters hotel, yet street cars run every two minutes and the service was admirable and efficient. The coliseum, where the meetings were held, was convenient and adequate to the needs of the purpose.

Because the convention has been unwieldy in times past, there was only one delegate from each club this year and no alternates, so the attendance was smaller than usual, only 932 delegates being registered, and on one evening, each state president gave a two-minute talk of the best things her state had accomplished during the last two years. A light flashed from the speaker's table when she said that she had been to the convention, and the women backed off the platform, each talking as fast as possible to finish her report.

The weather was of June with roses blooming and grassy meadows filling the air with fragrance.

Not only the experts of the United States, but of the world, brought their best thoughts to the conference, and among those mentioned by Mrs. Harvey was Miss Jane Addams, who spoke of the work of the women across the sea, as the "second line of defense of the war," and urged the women of this land to get into the work of producing food in every way.

Mrs. Hoover, wife of Herbert Hoover of the conservation board, was described as a charming woman who described the saving of wheat more necessary at this time than the making of munitions. Jeannette Rankin, who spoke for women in industry, pleading that the standard of wages and hours be kept during wartime; Esther Lovejoy, a Red Cross physician who has been stationed at the German border, which has been the making of a charming woman.

of the camps. All during the convention, Mrs. Harvey said, the women's dress was discussed as openly and as frankly as scarlet fever, and in this way, it was claimed, some progress in combating them could be arrived at.

Miss Mary Hay, suffrage leader in New York state, spoke of work done along that line, and Mrs. Mary Bradford, president of the National Educational Association, spoke of the great illiteracy in the country, and means which should be taken to abate it. Mr. Simmons, director of Red Cross work in the south west, and Mrs. Baker (wife of Secretary Baker), who is herself a finished musician, sang some of the sweet songs which she has been singing to the men in the army cantonnments in all sections of the west. Some of the business transacted by the convention was briefly outlined by Mrs. Harvey in the resolutions passed by that body. A motion picture of the work of the suffrage, saying it was not fitting for women to fight for democracy when half their citizens were denied the ballot.

Recommendations that English be taught in all schools, public, secular or private, and also that all pupils be taught civics and patriotism; and a pledge themselves to use no wheat until September.

Steps taken to prohibit dissemination of Mormon literature as being against the constitution of the United States.

Asking that two women be appointed to sit on the peace board when terms of peace be discussed.

Discussion of simplifying dress, and sentiments expressed against wearing mourning or black, a star on a sleeve band being an insignia for the loss of a soldier relative.

Resolutions to raise a two million dollar fund for furlough houses in France for the soldiers of our country, and the meeting closed with the sending of a cablegram to General Pershing to be read to the boys in camp, assuring them that the women of the U. S. A. were back of them to their last dollar and last bit of strength.

The meeting of yesterday was an annual event, and on this occasion they entertained the "Village Improvement Club" of Milton. On the alternate night they are the hosts of the club, and entertain the club women of the Junction. The meeting was held in the Woodman hall and about fifty ladies were present. Mrs. E. H. Hull sang a solo as a preliminary number, and the "Girls' Glee Club" of the high school sang a patriotic medley which was very enjoyable. The president of the Fortnightly Club, Miss Vickery, presided at the meeting and several ladies from Janesville went up to Milton Junction to enjoy the meeting.

Ancient "Breadfather."

Of what great importance the loaf, which before 1200 was the name of bread, was a daily food can be inferred from its relation with the word "lord." For lord, A. S. hlaford, (hlaf, bread, loaf; weard, a keeper), is probably a contraction of hlaf-weard, literally "loaf-ward" and therefore, originally signified the keeper or dispenser of bread—in short, the breadfather, to whom the members of the family had to apply for their daily bread.

How to Conquer.

Infinite toil would not enable you to sweep away a mist, but by ascending a little you may often look over it altogether. So it is with our moral improvement; we wrestle fiercely with a vicious habit, which could have no hold upon us if we ascended into a higher moral atmosphere.—Hepbs.

SNAPPY GAME WILL BE ROLLED TONIGHT

Baptists Out in Force to Win From St. Paul. While the Latter Will Have Their Best Men on Hand.

"Win" is the slogan of both the Baptist bowlers and the St. Paul players for the match which will be staged tonight on the Y. M. C. A. alleys. Both teams are nearly tied, and taking previous games as an indication it will be an exciting match. The St. Paul's men need the three games to win the tourney, but the Baptists are not in the running, although still have a fighting chance. Should the St. Paul's men lose the three games they will probably be tied up with the Methodists, who have two series to play, but both games with weak teams, and will undoubtedly win, and then these two teams will have to line up for the finals. Much speculation is already afloat as to the game. As the Methodist and St. Paul teams are unquestionably the best in the city, the fans would like to see a three game series played and only played by plans, not by games as now. The Baptists will have their whole outfit of rollers on deck to help keep the spirit from waning tonight!

ITALIAN FLAG WILL FLY AT POSTOFFICE

To Commemorate the Third Anniversary of Italy's Entrance into the War; Requested by the President.

On the morning of May 24, the National flag of Italy will be flying from the staff on the local post office building, directly below the Stars and Stripes, according to the statement of Postmaster J. J. Cunningham, this morning. The flying of the Italian flag below the American flag was requested by President Wilson to commemorate the third anniversary of Italy's entrance into the war. The government of Italy, Italian flags on hand and no funds available with which to secure them, but it requested the postmasters to secure, if possible, the use of an Italian flag for that day from a public spirited citizen in the community.

An Italian flag has been secured through Allen P. Lovejoy for use on the date set.

ACCIDENT VICTIMS REPORTED IMPROVED

Mr. and Mrs. Risch, and Two Daughters Are Recovering from Accident on Magnolia Road Saturday Evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Risch and two daughters, Adele and Nellie, who were injured Saturday evening on the Magnolia road when they were struck by an automobile driven by William J. Jones, are reported to be much improved today and their injuries will not be as serious as was at first thought. Examinations conducted by the physician showed that Adele, the oldest daughter, sustained a broken arm in addition to having her hip torn from the socket, while Nellie and her limbs broken above the elbow. Mr. Risch was injured in the chest while Mr. Risch had his left leg injured.

According to Mr. Risch's version of the accident, the driver of the car that struck them did not see them, as he passed on the wrong side of a buggy which was coming from the opposite direction. Mr. Risch and his family went to the side of the road to get out of the path of an automobile coming towards town and also to let a horse and buggy pass. Mr. Fessenden, in trying to avoid the oncoming car and the buggy, passed on the inside of the buggy and struck the four people who were walking in the ditch.

Life of Janesville Boys at Waco To Be Shown in Film

Friends and relatives of soldiers who enlisted from Janesville and who were killed at Waco, Texas, will have an opportunity to see the boys as they lived at camp in pictures, work and pleasure in this city at the Beverly Theatre on Thursday and Friday. These pictures are exceptionally good and are placed on a screen so that one viewing them can easily pick out his or her friend on the screen. The pictures were made by Fred Parrish of Madison, who will exhibit them for a short time in Wisconsin for a short time. They are authorized by the war department and will be exhibited only in Wisconsin.

ROCK COUNTY CITY HONORED IN WEST

First Vessel, Launched by Tacoma Ship Building Company Named after City of Beloit.

Governor Philipp today received a telegram from the Tacoma Ship Building company notifying him that they named their first ship, which they launched yesterday, after the city of Beloit.

Governor Philipp sent the following telegram to the company: "Wisconsin is honored in having the first boat launched by your company named after one of its principal cities. Beloit is one of the most important industrial centers of our commonwealth. I trust the flag of freedom and democracy will ever fly from the masthead of the boat that carries the name Beloit."

HE'S PERISHING'S FAITHFUL ORDERLY

Sergeant Frank Lanckton.

Sergeant Frank Lanckton, orderly of Gen. John J. Pershing for the past four years, recently sailed for France after having been temporarily detached from his chief to accompany Secretary Baker back to America. He was the constant attendant of the secretary of war throughout his tour abroad. The days he spent in Washington after Secretary Baker returned were restless ones, for he was anxious to get back to his chief. His devotion to Pershing after having been with him in the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies, Japan, Mexico and Europe disproves the adage that "no man is a hero to his valet." Lanckton is a native of Cleveland. He says Paris is much more cheerful about the outcome of the war than Washington.

NEW LEADERS OF THE AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT

SUBMISSIVE TO KAISER; WILL THEY STAY IN POWER?

It is significant that the new leaders of the Austro-Hungarian government—Baron Burian, the new foreign minister, and Count Tisza, the new premier—are absolutely submissive to the Kaiser, and favor carrying the war to the bitter end. Austro-Hungarian statements favoring negotiated peace have been compelled to retire.

Will the government of the dual monarchy remain forever submissive to Berlin? There is strong evidence that Emperor Charles and Empress Zita are heartily sick of the war, and the emperor's recently published letter to Prince Sixtus indicates that he is straining at the leash. The Austro-Hungarian people are said to be tired of fighting and would welcome even a peace of quiet.

MAYTIME CIRCUS AT TERPSICHOEAN HALL

Bonita Club Held Society Circus and Dancing Party Last Evening. Proceeds Donated to Belgian Relief.

A Maytime circus and dancing party was given by the young ladies of the Bonita club at the Terpsichorean hall last evening. The circus was held from eight o'clock until midnight.

A perfect riot of colors greeted the eye on entering the hall, streams of colored paper were suspended from the ceiling and the orchestra stand was banked with flowers. The side shows were arranged around the hall, including the fat woman, the fortune teller, the fish pond, the chamber of horrors, the hula hula girl, and many others. Miss Hazel Gokey danced two numbers in a Spanish costume.

At ten o'clock the Arcadia orchestra started playing. "I love you truly," the grand march opened the dance program and it was a motley crowd that participated in the march. There were sailors, soldiers, farmers, clowns, Mutt and Jeff, Charlie Chaplin, and many other impersonations.

The prizes for the best costumes were awarded to Mrs. Raymond Palmer as an old maid; Misses Burns and Daley as the farmer couple; Mutt and Jeff, Misses Elizabeth and Edith Byrne.

The party was a decided success from all points. The proceeds will be given to the Belgian Relief.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

William S. Hart, the famous "bad man" of the screen, has announced his engagement. Yes, indeed, according to telegrams from Los Angeles "Bill" made a formal announcement that he is to become the husband of Miss Margaret Evans.

Throughout his career as an actor and even in private life he has been unusually shy of the fair sex and one of his recent pictures received much publicity from the fact that he actually kissed the heroine. And now after acquiring the reputation of a confirmed bachelor he spoils it all by getting engaged. Well, it only goes to show that you never can tell about these "bad men" of the wild and woolly west.

When talking about marriage some time ago, before any one knew of Miss Evans, Hart was heard to say, "It's not my fault I'm not married. Women don't respond to my advances. One girl I was in love with married another man just before the day set for our ceremonies. All my love affairs have been one-sided. I am, however, going to get married as soon as I can find the girl."

It would seem as if Miss Margaret Evans, the daughter of a wealthy ranchman, was the right one. The romance is said to have started via correspondence. Miss Evans is a non-professional.

The date for the wedding has not been set, but "Bill" better hurry up getting some other western bad man has a chance to carry her off.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

We invite you to visit our Pattern Department

Friday, May 17th

To Meet Mrs. C. Milnes

Special Representative of THE PICTORIAL REVIEW CO., of New York.

Mrs. Milnes will explain the many distinctive features of PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS, which make them superior to all other patterns.

The patent cutting and constructive features furnished only with PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS save time, labor and material in every case, they show just how to lay out the parts of the pattern on the material to cut and how to assemble the parts in completing the garment.

Don't fail to meet Mrs. Milnes and learn of the many advantages contained in PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS not found in any other pattern.

GO TO ELKHORN ON THURSDAY MORNING

Gathering of Republicans of First Congressional District Scheduled For This Week.

Thursday, May sixteen, promises to be an important day in republican politics in the First Congressional district, especially at Elkhorn where will be the Mecca for all persons interested in the possible selection of a loyal republican as candidate for congress.

Some three weeks ago there was a conference in Racine at which matters political were discussed. It was decided then to call for a more general gathering to be held at Elkhorn on May 16th and a committee of five from each county in the district was written to secure a large attendance. Rock, Walworth, Waukesha, Racine and Kenosha comprise the district and for many years past Henry Allen Cooper has been the congressman from this district. Question as to the fitness of his being returned to congress owing to his vote on war measures has arisen and the conference on Thursday may decide to give their united support to some other aspirant for office or they may decide to give their united support to Mr. Cooper.

Orville Morse has charge of the Janesville contingent and it is expected that at least a dozen cars will leave Janesville at eight-thirty filled with interested republicans to attend the conference. In view of the fact that the republican vote in Rock and Walworth counties at the last test of loyalty was so decisive while Waukesha gave Davies a plurality and Berge a strong endorsement and Racine and Kenosha are uncertain quantities, the selection of a candidate is thought to rest with these two counties.

Persons desiring to attend the conference should not fail to bring with them a copy of the details of the plans as suggested at a gathering of a few interested republicans recently when it was decided to send a delegation from each county to work with the Walworth county republicans on this important question.

Many names of possible candidates for the congressional nomination have been suggested. J. C. Whittey of Edgerton; A. E. Matheson, John M. Whitehead of Janesville; Harry Adams of Beloit, and present State Senator Lawrence E. Cunningham of Beloit. No real boom has been started for any of the gentlemen named, nor have any of them actually signified their intention of becoming candidates but they are possibilities.

It is probable that Racine county will suggest the name of W. W. Storms, while strong efforts are being made by friends of Mr. Goodland of Racine to have the lightning strike his way. Goodland is secretary of the Loyalty League of the state and until recently a supporter of Senator La Follette. However, the conference Thursday promises to be a lively and most interesting one, and there will be large delegations from all parts of the First Congressional district.

Wants "His Price." Green Bay, May.—George Lemke, son of Fred Lemke of the town of Morrison, Brown county, was accused in municipal court Monday of aiding the enemy country with which this country is at war. He is alleged to have expostulated with his father and with a liberty loan solicitor when the father said he believed it his duty to subscribe for bonds and also to have declared he would not let the government have a quantity of grain unless he got "his price." The arrest was made under a state statute. Lemke pleaded not guilty and the case was put over to May 20.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl almost nineteen. I have had a great many boy friends—not merely friends but suitors. I am keeping company with a young man almost nine years older than myself. We think a great deal of each other. He is my second cousin. Do you think we are too closely related to marry?

There is also another barrier. He has been raised in a very different community from where I have been raised. He has a very different way of thinking than I have. He is a very good person, but I am not sure that I can live in a community like that.

Some of my relatives are against my marrying him. I think it is because I am a distant relation. Should other people's opinions count for anything when it means my happiness?

PUZZLED.

It is supposed to be all right for second cousins to marry, but doctors consider it safe.

There are people with high standards in this locality who believe as you do even where morals are looser.

I think, however, that you are very young to marry and should not even become engaged for a year or two. You should consider the opinions of your friends very seriously because they have your happiness at heart.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

Never read a letter addressed to anyone else. This is one of the lowest forms of vulgarity.

BLUES: When going out to luncheon with a friend, the one who extends the invitation does the ordering. In case it is a young man who invites you, he will inquire as to your preferences, and later give the order to the waiter. Side dishes of vegetables are placed at the left and eaten with a fork held in the right hand. If the main course of the luncheon comes in individual dishes, yet are served in one place, helping from it in your own plate. When eating chop suey and rice, and the rice is served in a separate dish, it is proper to lift a spoonful of rice onto your plate and eat it with the chop suey.

R. E. S.: It is foolish as well as improper for a girl of seventeen to accept attention from a young man. Fifteen years is entirely too young for boys to begin paying attention to girls. However, there is no harm in walking on a side street with a boy when other boys and girls accompany you. Talk to your boy friends just as you would to your girl friends on points of mutual interest. Let your boy friend offer to take you home from evening school in his machine, if there is someone along to chaperone, or other young people for company. I see no harm in accepting the invitation. It is not necessary for a young man to take a lady's arm, unless to assist her when crossing a street, or in helping her in or out of a car or place of public conveyance.

Lemons and almonds will improve your complexion.

The first time you use American National lemon and almond cream you will realize the change it is going to make in your skin.

Use it daily, and your complexion will gain the charm of soft velvety smoothness, free from blemishes. American is non-greasy, quickly absorbed and its delightful fragrance will please you.

SIDE TALKS

BY RUTH CAMERON

To Make Woman Happy

"Man wants but little here below, He is not hard to please, But woman, bless her little heart, Wants everything she sees."

The purport of that familiar phrase of the old hymn is, of course, that it takes a great deal to make a woman happy.

And so it does—of some things. And of others, infinitesimally little.

Some days ago, I read in a contributor's column in the newspaper a letter from a young wife. Titled and happiness simply shone through that letter. And yet I should not say, from the context, that she had much of this world's goods.

But she had a great deal of something else.

I found it in one paragraph in the letter.

I quote from memory:

"One day my husband was singing 'Oh, Gee, I'm glad I'm free, an' I asked him what he would do if he were free and he said he would hunt me up and marry me over again!'"

You could almost feel the thrill of pride and happiness with which she wrote that sentence.

Perhaps the man who said it didn't care any more for his wife than hundreds of men who would have said, 'I'd go down street and pick up a good looking chicken, or 'I'd go out and get properly lit up,' or some such thing that they didn't mean at all.

What He Would Do If He Were Free

"One day my husband was singing 'Oh, Gee, I'm glad I'm free, an' I asked him what he would do if he were free and he said he would hunt me up and marry me over again!'"

You could almost feel the thrill of pride and happiness with which she wrote that sentence.

Perhaps the man who said it didn't care any more for his wife than hundreds of men who would have said, 'I'd go down street and pick up a good looking chicken, or 'I'd go out and get properly lit up,' or some such thing that they didn't mean at all.

At the semi-regular meeting of the Women's Equal Rights Club, Mrs. Wilda Bull addressed the huge audience as follows:

"Ladies! Fellow-sufferers, (hear, hear). They call us new women. (Man's voice from gallery 'they mean old ones pointed over.') We have at last come into our own, (aye, aye). No longer do we sit comfortably in street cars while men hang onto the straps. (Cheers). No; we hang on the straps while the men sit down. (Loud clapping). No longer do we soil our hands peeling potatoes and smart our eyes peeling onions. (Handkerchiefs and tears). No; now we boil them with their skins on. (Enthusiastic waving of knitted stuffs on needles). No longer do we get a weekly allowance for the house—no! We get the whole envelope! (Here several faint for joy). No longer do we see good plays paid for by inferior men. No. We go to the movies and independently pay for our own tickets. (Cheers from women in the men)."

Ladies! My sisters in bondage! At last are we to vote. A large number of bad men in office; only the handsome ones shall be chosen for office beside the handsome women. (Moans from the gallery). (Approving clicking of needles from

No longer shall the men choose us for marriage—we shall choose them. (Groans from gallery). We shall! (Unfortunately for the end of the speech some wicked male in the gallery yelled "fire!" at this point, and the whole audience rushed madly to the exits, where they would have been trampled to death but for the timely assistance of the inferior men in the gallery. NO USE FOR LATIN, BUT GOOD ON SWEDISH

St. Paul, Minn., May 14.—A man applied for admission to the marine corps. He was being examined to test his vision. For this test a card bearing these letters is used: A, E, I, T, X, P, H, A, L, T. The applicant gazed at the card for a moment and then turned to the physician and said: "I'm not sure what the word is, but I think it's Aeltyphat. If that were Swedish I'd have no trouble at all, but I never was much good on those Latin words."

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

Sweets for the Strong.

The bunkering for sweets of the boys at the front is a very natural one. Sugar is a source of immediately available energy for muscular effort. The craving for the growing child for candy is equally normal. The child needs protein for building and warmth for growth, carbohydrates for muscular energy. Candy or sugar in any form is carbohydrate, just as surely as is sugar in a baby's natural food. More than half of the solid matter in breast milk is sugar, milk sugar.

In advocating sugar, candy and sweets in the diet of growing children we wish to remind parents of two precautions. First, children should not be permitted to buy all sorts of confectionery, jimmies and lollipops. Such candy as is not made at home should be obtained from responsible merchants who have some regard for the purity and cleanliness of such merchandise. And second, children should not be allowed to indulge the desire for candy and sweets at all times of the day, but only at regular meal times, as for dessert. It is not advisable to let a child nibble constantly or irregularly at any food, no matter how wholesome.

We can remember when we wanted ever so much, something sweet, cake or cookies or candy, but grandma, with her finger and thumb, intervened in favor of just taters or canned fruit or something equally unattractive. Why do grandmas assume that what they liked when they were girls is not so good for grandchildren?

A growing child needs fresh meat about three times a week, for building material; various forms of fresh fat daily for growth (butter, milk, cream, egg yolk); carbohydrate for quickly available energy. The child needs protein for building and warmth for growth, carbohydrates for muscular energy. Candy or sugar in any form is carbohydrate, just as surely as is sugar in a baby's natural food. More than half of the solid matter in breast milk is sugar, milk sugar.

If there be one among you who says sugar makes children have worms, shoot him at sunrise. A child grows strong by active play. Let him have ample sweets in his daily ration to play on.

And here is a tip to the husbands: Take home some candy to the hired girl just as though you hadn't married her.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I wrote you some time ago asking some important questions, and I have watched you never answer my questions, and I am disappointed. (Daisy D.)

ANSWER: I wish I could reply to every query here in print. But alas, I have space for only a few printed answers. I have perhaps a hundred questions to be answered. I have a stamped (3c) addressed envelope, and so you can't fare better.

ANSWER: Dissolve all the borax in the water will take up when still quite warm. Use at night and morning, having the solution comfortably warm.

Household Hints

MENU HINTS.

Breakfast. Poached Eggs, Toast, Orange-Juice, Coffee.

Luncheon. Milk Toast, Neufchatel Cheese, Alabaster Biscuits, Molasses Crisps.

Dinner. Scalloped Ham and Potatoes, Sliced Carrots, Fried Parsnips, Banana Bread-Pudding.

THE TABLE.

Scalloped Ham and Potatoes (from above menu)—Two cups of bread-crumbs, one cup of milk, minced ham, two tablespoons of four, one cup of milk, two tablespoons of fat, seasoning.

Melt fat and add the flour gradually. Cook until it begins to bubble. Add the cold milk a little at a time, stirring constantly until thickened. Season to taste. Add the cooked, diced potatoes. Sauté bread-crumbs in water, and sauté until dry. Into a can of baking dish put a layer of bread-crumbs, then alternate with ham, creamed potatoes and bread-crumbs until all are used. Top with bread-crumbs and brown in the oven.

Scrapie. One pound sausage meat put in one quart water, boil, add salt and pepper to taste. Take one teaspoon cornmeal and one-half cup of sausage meat and keep stirring until it is as thick as mush. Pour out in pan or cold. Fry in slices like meat.

Choco Souffle (very economical). Two cups milk, one egg, piece of cheese size of an egg, sprinkle of salt. Beat egg, add milk, sugar and grated cheese and pour over two large or four small slices of stale bread. Bake in moderate oven one-half hour; add red pepper if desired.

Ruchess Potatoes. Two cups of boiled potato, add one teaspoon melted butter, beat until light and smooth, then add six tablespoons milk or cream and yolk of one egg, beat well. When well mixed, add the beaten whites. Fill hot gem pans and brown.

Healthful Salad. Chop one medium-sized onion with about one quart of clean, young dandelion greens and cover with this dressing: One-half teaspoon mustard, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon cornmeal, one-half cup vinegar, one-half cup cold water. Cook until thickened. A dash of paprika will improve it.

TRY THESE

Save Orange Peel and dry and grind it; add one teaspoonful to four cups of tea at time of brewing. This additional flavor is delightful in a cup of tea.

Dry Clean Your Comb and Brush this way: Sprinkle a handful of cornmeal on the bristles of the brush and the comb back and forth until both are clean. When cleaned in this way, the bristles will be snowy white, and the back of the brush will not be wet nor the bristles loosened.

Pinfeathers Are Troublesome when picking chicken or birds, take a cloth and some sittings of cornmeal and rub the feathers with it. The pinfeathers will come off easily.

To Tighten The Sewing-Machine Band do not cut, but put a few drops of castor oil on it and run the machine a few seconds. The oil will shrink the leather band.

To Separate Honey from the Comb put the cake of honey in a bowl and pour water over it. Just warm enough to melt the honey and wax. Remove the frame and let the honey stand until cold. Then the wax may be easily removed off the top.

A Serviceable Linoleum May be Made by Sewing together strips of heavy duck or denim. Stretch each on the back of a chair and let dry; then pour on a coat of varnish and you will have a floor covering that will stand for years.

The Friendly Forest

Sometimes everything goes wrong. But never mind, just sing a song. And never, never feel dismayed. Because your plans get worn and faded. Keep up your spirit day by day. And make a new plan right away.

This is what the Weathercock sang on a rainy day when Billy Bunny by mistake ran the Luckymobile up onto the roof, where it stopped. Which was mighty lucky, for if it had gone down the other side it might have split out all the electricity in the car and broken the lamps.

"That's a very pretty song," said Uncle Lucky, as soon as he got his breath, for he was almost scared to death, and so was his small nephew; "and I admire your cheerfulness. But tell me, what is the best thing to do now that we are perched up here like two sparrows? How are we to get down, and what is to become of our machine?"

"Well," said the Weathercock, swinging around and around, for the wind was blowing from all directions and wouldn't let him stand still, "can't you slide down the same way you came up?" You see, there was a little low shed built against the side of the barn up which the Luckymobile had gone, so it wasn't such a bad idea after all.

"It's pretty risky," sighed the old gentleman rabbit, "but we'll try." So he took hold of the brake with his left hand, and with his right he pushed down the other side of the automobile, and would you believe it, pretty soon they were safely on the ground again, and nothing was broken except a little piece of Billy Bunny's hat, as not to lose it. "I'll buy you a new one," said kind, generous Uncle Lucky, and then Billy Bunny ate it all up, but first he gave the old gentleman rabbit two hundred and forty-nine bites.

Well, everything would have been all right if just that moment the farmer who owned the big red barn hadn't come out of his house and said: "What do you mean by scraping the red paint off my barn?"

"We didn't mean to," said Uncle Lucky, looking at the scratches. "What will it cost to have it fixed?"

"Don't know," said the farmer. And he didn't look very pleased. In fact, he looked very cross and scowled at Billy Bunny. And then what do you think the little rabbit did? He opened his innards and took out a can of red paint and a brush, and in a few minutes he had painted out the scratches until the cross old farmer couldn't tell where they had been, although he tried his best to find them. "Well, you certainly are a clever little rabbit," he said, and then he smiled and invited them in his house for lunch, and his wife took such a fancy to Billy Bunny that she let him look all through her photograph album and guess which were the pictures of her when she was a little girl without any wrinkles or gray hair. And Billy Bunny passed the right evening, which made her so happy that she gave him a pocketful of cookies. And in the next story you shall hear what he did with them.

FLOW UP CEMETERY TO RAISE WAR GARDENS

McKeesport, Pa., May 14.—They're going to raise liberty lettuce and win-the-war watermelons in the most exclusive cemetery in McKeesport this summer.

So intensive has become the war garden campaign here that enough space for all the gardens applied for could not be found in all the vacant lots and golf courses about town, so lots and golf yards was drafted into the service of democracy. The "democracy of the grave" no longer will be a rhetorical figure. It will be a materialized in terms of cabbage and corn.

Already the vacant lots in the cemetery have been plowed. They are being prepared for planting, and boys and girls alike soon will be turning the "city of the dead" into a mighty lively location.

Best Way To Wash The Hair

We find you can bring out the beauty of your hair to its very best advantage by washing it with Canthrox. It makes a very simple, inexpensive shampoo, which cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly of all the dandruff, dirt and excess oil, leaving a wonderfully clean, wholesome feeling. After its use you will find that the hair dries quickly and evenly, is never streaked in appearance, and is always bright, soft and fluffy. In fact, that it looks more abundant than it is, and so soft that arranging it becomes a pleasure. Just use a teaspoonful of Canthrox, which you can get from any good druggist's, dissolve it in a cup of hot water; this makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head.

Observations of a War Horse

My Dear Niece:

Before anything happens to induce forgetfulness I must tell you the story of the girl in the postoffice. She is such a contrast to Carmelita and her point of view.

This girl is an animated brown surrounded by blond curls. When you first see her find yourself wondering what she has recently eaten that has made her so fat. She looks at the world through a square window which seems to curdle all she sees. She seems to curdle her job with a private company; but people have to go to the money order window of their postoffice from time to time. It is not I am sure that I for one could go half a mile out of my way to avoid it.

Mrs. Lucas is responsible for my comments on this young woman, for she was who towed me to the money order window. The old king's widow and I had been buying tickets to a local theater that is running some wonderful war pictures. Since the moving picture business is democratic we stood in line. However, at this point I wish to rise to remark to the world at large that there is nothing democratic about the price of tickets. All cheap tickets, moderate priced tickets and reasonable tickets were sold when we arrived. This bit of information was given us by the girl at the window who demanded of that young person her reason for classing her ticket as a cheap one. I don't know how much extra this question cost her, but when she had paid for the tickets she found her funds reduced to a few pennies and an uncashed postage stamp for $0.10.

And we made haste to the postoffice to exchange the bit of paper for coin of the realm.

"You'll have to be identified," said the blonde girl at the window. Mrs. Lucas was astounded, and informed that sour-visaged person that "Everybody knows me, I'm Mrs. Michael Monahan Lucas."

"You'll have to prove it," was the curt reply.

Mrs. Lucas handed her silver purse across the window with a magnificent gesture, and signed a check in the index finger of the girl at the window saying gently, and with the smile that she knows how to make delightful:

"There is my name, dear. Of course you should know who I am because I'm the girl who's been growing."

The brown deepened and the girl growled:

"That name's Mary O'Brien Lucas."

"Certainly," said the grand dame, still smiling. "Everybody in the city knows that my name is Mary O'Brien Lucas, and that's the name of my husband's widow. And a minute. Haven't you ever seen my name in the papers?"

"No, I haven't. And everybody in town don't know you." I don't know you," said the girl at the window, sorting papers. I beckoned a sub postoffice in one of the department stores and asked her if she knew the lady with the money order in her hand.

"Yes, everybody knows her," said Mrs. Lucas, then descended into her bag, at least her papers, cards and brought out letters, papers, cards and these she handed to the girl who squinted scornfully as she viewed them.

"They prove nothing," she said. "How do I know where you got 'em?"

Mrs. Lucas began to get red in the face, a habit she has when the subject of vulgarities is brought in. She was in a bad way, and she fears the pressure of feeling may bring out scraps of her old vocabulary. She pointed to two plump hands holding the girl at the window and spoke regarding

JUDGE DECIDES STOMACH REMEDY A GREAT SUCCESS

Commissioner of Mediation and Conciliation Board Tries EATONIC, the Wonderful Stomach Remedy and Endorses It.

JUDGE WILLIAM L. CHAMBERS

The judicial mind does not readily commit itself. This is especially true of judges who have to do with litigation proceedings, where both sides have to be satisfied or there is no result. Nothing tests a judge so severely, Judge William L. Chambers, who uses EATONIC as a remedy for loss of appetite and indigestion, has a long record of successes in both industrial and international arbitration. He is a Commissioner in the U. S. Board of Mediation and Conciliation, and the fairness of his conclusions is proved by his popularity among employers and working men alike. He has also served on many LEACER commissions. It is most natural for him to express himself in guarded language, yet there is no hesitation in his pronouncement regarding the value of EATONIC. Writing from Washington, D. C., to the Eatonic Remedy Co., he says:

"EATONIC promotes appetite and aids digestion. I have used it with beneficial results."

Very respectfully,

WILLIAM L. CHAMBERS.

What higher authority could one ask for? If you suffer another day from stomach disorder and do not take EATONIC, it is your own fault. Be guided by the advice of Judge Chambers. Hundreds of thousands of office workers and others who sit much are martyrs to dyspepsia, belching, bad breath, heartburn, poor appetite, and impairment of general health. Are you, yourself, a sufferer? EATONIC will relieve you of your stomach troubles and benefit you just as surely as it has benefited Judge Chambers and thousands of others. Here's the secret: EATONIC drives the gas out of the body—and the Bloat Goes With It! It is guaranteed to bring relief or your money back! Costs only a cent or two a day to use it. RAINBOW'S END

A NOVEL

Esteban poked upon his elbow. His face was a study. "What have you arranged?" he managed to inquire. "Sh-h!" Norine laid a finger upon his lips. "The guest of the republic is to be married today."

"Norine! Oh, my dear—" quavered the sick man. "I can't let you do this mad thing. Think! I'm ready for the grave."

"This will make you well. We're going away when the very next expedition arrives."

"I haven't the strength to refuse. And yet, how can I leave Cuba?" What right have I to accept happiness and leave Rosa—

This was a subject which Norine dreaded, a question to which she knew no answer. She was not in a mood to discuss it, and made no attempt to do so. Instead, she laid the invalid upon his pillow, saying:

"Lestlie is waiting to wish you joy and a quick recovery. May I ask him in?"

She stepped to the door, only to behold her late companion making off down the village street in great haste and evident excitement. Approaching between the drunken rows of grass huts was a little knot of people. Even as Norine watched it grew into a considerable crowd, for men and women and children came hurrying from their tasks. There were three figures in the lead, a man and two boys, and they walked slowly, ploddingly, as if weary from a long march.

"Esteban!" Norine cried in a voice she scarcely recognized. She retreated into the doorway with one hand upon her leaping heart. "Esteban! Look! They're coming—here! Yes! It's—It's O'Reilly!"

Young Varona struggled from his hammock. "Rosa!" he called, loudly. "Rosa!"

There came a shadow, then in the doorway the figure of a man, a tattered scarecrow of a man whose feet were bare and whose brown calves were exposed through tattered rags. His breast was naked where thorns had tried to stay him; his beard, even his hair, were matted and unkempt, and the mud of many trails lay caked upon his garments.

It was O'Reilly!

Dumb with amazement, blind with tears, Norine found herself staring upward into his face, and heard him saying:

"I told you I would bring her home."

The next instant she lay upon his breast and sobs of joy were tearing at her.

The story of Rosa's rescue came slowly and in fragments, for the news of O'Reilly's return caused a sensation. His arrival was interrupted many times. "As a matter of fact, our getaway was ridiculously easy," he said, "for we had luck at every turn—regular Irish luck. I made Morin, independent for life, but it wasn't the money. It was Jacket who induced him to bring us clear to Tigriguan. He landed us one night, this side of the Moron trocha. Since then we've waded swamps to our armpits, we've fought the jungle and chewed bark—but we're here." Johnnie heaved a deep sigh of relief.

"Where did you get the money to hire schooners and corrupt captains?" Branch inquired.

O'Reilly hesitated; he lowered his voice to a whisper. "We found the Varona treasure."

"Not Don Esteban's treasure?"

"Exactly. It was in the well where young Esteban told us it was."

Johnnie produced from his pocket a handful of coins.

Branch's eyes bulged, he touched a gold piece respectfully, weighed it carefully, then pressed it to his lips. He rubbed it against his cheeks and in his hand; he placed it between his teeth and bit it.

"It's real!" he cried. "Now let me look at the jewels."

"Rosa has them. She's wearing them on her back. Hunched backs are lucky, you know; hers is worth a fortune."

"Why, this beats the 'Arabian Nights'!" Norine gasped.

"It beats—" Branch paused, then wagged his head warningly at the girl. "I don't believe a word of it and you mustn't!"

Then Johnnie told the story. When he had finished there was a long moment of silence. Then Norine quavered tremulously: "That boy! That blessed boy!"

"It's all too weirdly improbable," O'Reilly smiled, "but ask Rosa or Jacket—the boy is bursting to tell some one. He nearly died because he couldn't brag about it to Captain Morin, and there won't be any holding him now. I'm afraid he'll tip off the news about that treasure in spite of all my warnings. Those jewels are a temptation; I won't rest easy until they're safely locked up in some good vault. Now then, I've told you everything, but I'm dying for news. Tell me about yourselves, about Esteban. I expected to find him well. What ails him?"

"Oh, Johnnie!" Norine began. "He's very ill. He isn't getting well. Help me, Johnnie! Help me to get him home."

"Of course I will. We'll take him and Rosa away where they can forget Cuba and all the misery it has caused them. We'll make him well—don't worry."

O'Reilly saw little of his sweetheart that day, for Norine promptly bore the girl off to her own quarters and there attended to her needs, the most pressing of which was clothing.

While O'Reilly was similarly engaged in making himself presentable, he and Branch talked earnestly, with the result that they repaired later to General Gomez. O'Reilly concluded by saying:

"I've done what I came to do, sir, but Miss Varona is badly shaken by all she has been through. She's very nervous and far from well. Esteban, too, isn't recovering."

General Gomez nodded. "Miss Evans declares he must have a change, and we have arranged to send him out of the country. His sister, poor child, should go, too."

"They should go at once," O'Reilly said, positively. "That's why we came to see you. Let us—Branch and me—take all three of them to the United States."

"But how? How can you take two women and a sick man—"

"We'll manage somehow," O'Reilly declared. "It isn't far across to the Bahama Banks. I'll agree to come back if you so desire."

Gomez shook his white head. "Not you came to find and save your fiancée, and you volunteered to serve with us while you were doing so. We have no desire to keep any man against his will. Some one must escort Miss Evans, who in our guest. Why not you two?"

"I was looking forward to an interesting ceremony this afternoon," Gomez went on. "Has your arrival changed the plans?"

"Oh no, sir!" O'Reilly said, quickly. "I'd like to make it doubly interesting, if Miss Varona will consent to such short notice."

"Bravo! You have a way of doing the unexpected. Why not? I don't think Miss Varona will have it in her heart to refuse you anything."

The old soldier was right. Rosa did not grieve for her lover, and toward sundown the city among the leaves witnessed an unaccustomed scene.

Rosa, very dainty in her borrowed nurse's uniform, was round-eyed, timid; she evoked much admiration, but when she was addressed as Senora O'Reilly she blushed to the roots of her hair and shrank close to her husband's side. Branch proved to be a happy choice as Esteban's proxy, for he relieved Norine's anxiety and smothered her apprehensions.

When Rosa and O'Reilly returned to Esteban's cabin they found Norine ahead of them. She was kneeling beside the sick man's hammock, and through the doorway came the low, intimate murmur of their voices. Rosa drew her husband away, whispering happily:

"He will get well. God and that wonderful girl won't let him die."

CHAPTER XXII.

The Rainbow's End.

The journey to the coast was made by easy stages and Esteban stood it fairly well. Jacket, of course, went along. Upon the announcement of O'Reilly's intended departure for the States he had promptly abandoned Cuba to her fate. He foreswore her utterly and declared himself a loyal American citizen.

Relying upon the best information obtainable at Cubitas, O'Reilly had counted upon securing a sailboat from a certain fisherman whose sympathies were known to be loyal, but in this he was disappointed. The party arrived at its destination, a tiny clearing on an unfrequented part of the north shore, only to find it deserted and already grown to weeds. The house was empty, the boats were gone—all but one old hulk, too rotten to warrant moving, which lay high up on the sand, its planks worm-eaten, its seams wide spread by the sun.

O'Reilly was in a quandary. He gravely doubted Esteban's ability to stand the rough return journey, and when he spoke to Norine of turning back she was panic-stricken at the suggestion.

"No, no!" she cried, anxiously. "We must get him away. His heart is set on going through and it would—kill him to go back."

"Then I guess we'll have to go through," he smiled.

For the first time in their acquaintance Norine lost control of herself. "Promise that you won't go back," she implored him.

"Very well, if you'll consent to risk this miserable tub we found on the beach—"

"I'll risk anything—a raft, even. Is there an even chance of our getting across?"

"Perhaps. It all depends upon the weather."

Dinner Stories

An official who was making up an assessment roll because of some recent street improvements called at each house on the improved streets to learn the names of the property owners. At one house he climbed out of his car, went to the door and knocked.

"Who owns this property?" he asked.

"Why, I do," the woman answered. The official got her name and put it down in his book. Then he took a squint at the size of the lot.

"How many feet?" he asked.

"Two, of course," the woman snapped, wondering whether he thought she was a centipede.

The lank, long-haired young man looked dreamily at the charming girl on whom he was endeavoring to make a favorable impression.

"Did you ever long for death?" he asked in a low and moving tone.

"Whose?" inquired the charming but practical young person.

"Really, you should feed your hounds more. Brother Johnson," mildly chided the presiding elder.

"They look half starved."

"Aw, them dogs is natcherly lank," replied Mr. Gap Johnson, of Rumpus Ridge, Ark. "I don't consider 'em hungry till they begin to bite the children."

"This war could be terminated very suddenly if I could get just two men in front of me," said the amateur strategist.

"What two men?" inquired his companion.

"The Kaiser—and that fellow they call Hun," was the reply.

"When I hear the popular songs whistled on the street wherever I go, I'm so thankful to the whistlers."

"Thankful?"

"Yes, suppose they could whistle the words."

Says Pile Remedy Worth $100.00 a Box

Columbus Man Knows What He Is Talking About

I have had itching piles ever since my earliest recollection. I am 53 years old and have suffered terribly. I have tried many remedies and doctors, but no cure. About 5 weeks ago I saw your ad for Peterson's Ointment. The first application stopped all itching, and in three days all sores. I have only used one 25c box day, consider I am cured. You have my heartfelt thanks, and may everyone that has this trouble see this and give Peterson's Ointment, that is worth a hundred dollars or more a box. A trial Sincerely yours, A. Newth, Columbus, Ohio.

"It makes me feel proud to be able to produce an ointment like that," says Peterson. "Not only do I guarantee Peterson's Ointment for old sores and wounds, but for Eczema, Salt Rheum, Ulcers, Itching Skin, Pimples, Blackheads and all skin diseases. I put up a big box for 25 cents, a price all can afford to pay and money back from your druggist if not satisfied."

Stoughton today to attend the wedding of Miss Faye Doolittle to Lloyd H. Severson of that city.

Mrs. Eph. Gilbert went to Monroe Friday on a short visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Engelhardt.

Mrs. L. V. Dodge spent Friday with friends in Juda.

J. B. Polce went to West Union, Iowa, Friday, to attend the funeral of a friend.

A special "Mothers' Day" service was held at the M. E. church on Sunday morning. There were decorations of flowers and the pastor, Rev. David H. Levin, gave a most interesting discourse in behalf of mothers. A large audience was present.

MR. BURNESON SAYS

NUJOL LABORATORIES,
STANDARD OIL CO. (New Jersey),
BAYONNE, N. J.

Gentlemen:—

"I purchased Nujol for my mother. She says that she received more benefits from the use of it than from any remedy that she has ever used for constipation."

Yours truly,

Richmondville, N. Y.

G. W. Burneson.

Don't dread, neglect or only partially relieve constipation! Do as Mrs. Burneson and thousands of others are doing:—let Nujol restore to Nature the power to move your bowels regularly and effectively! Get healthful, body-building relief—perfectly safe and beneficial relief,—simply by the use of Nujol. Remember the name and get a bottle at your druggist's.

Nujol is unadulterated—positively contains no drug. It acts without upsetting digestion; without griping; without distressing or dangerous reaction. It is pleasant to take; safe for all. Be one of the thousands who wisely avoid all harmful pills and salts. Use Nujol and be "regular as clockwork."

ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS

There are no substitutes—there is only Nujol

At every drug store. Send 50c. and we will ship new kit size to soldiers and sailors anywhere.

Regular as Clockwork

Nujol for constipation

In bottles only bearing the Nujol trade mark, never in bulk. Write for free booklet.

WAR MOVES WILL HIT MINOR LEAGUES HARD

(By Associated Press.)
New York, May 14.—The minor leagues must be ripped open to feed the majors.
The warning sounded a short time ago by Charles I. Hubbs, president of the Brooklyn National league club, carried a weight of wisdom and far sight that eventually must be taken to heart by every big league club owner. The situation is just this: Many men have left the big leagues through the national draft and through enlistment in the army or navy that the supply of ball players of league ability has dropped to a small number.

While there isn't a single club owner in the big leagues who would give Hubbs a cent for his advice, he has been left to paddle alone in the dark. Not a National league magnate has offered a helping hand to the squire of Flatbush.

Most of the magnates in the Tenor circuit have felt the hand of the army nearly as strongly as Hubbs. The situation is just this: Many men have left the big leagues through the national draft and through enlistment in the army or navy that the supply of ball players of league ability has dropped to a small number.

WILLARD HAS RECORD AS A FORTUNE MAKER

(By International News.)
New York, May 14.—When Jess Willard crawled through the ropes of fight Jack Johnson at Havana, April 6, 1915, he was flat broke.
He didn't possess enough coin of the realm to pay the promoter, and he would have a tough time getting back to the States and paying up debts that had accumulated.
Less than three years later, last March, to be exact, Willard was rated as the possessor of a fortune that ranged between $250,000 and $500,000.
If this isn't a record for fortune making, when it is considered that the time he faced Johnson until the present day the big follow has fought only thirty-six rounds, then we'll buy the cakes.

MR. WAD IS STILL BUSY MOBILIZING AMERICA'S INVENTIVE GENIUS!

WOULD GIVE SOLDIERS IN FRANCE BIG LEAGUE BASEBALL ATTRACTIONS

Major league baseball for American soldiers in France with professional players from the big circuits is the waking and dreaming hours of William J. Clarke, known as "Bill" Clarke, who had charge of Princeton's baseball team for ten years. Clarke is at present one of the Y. M. C. A. physical directors with the American Expeditionary Forces in France.

As a matter of fact, "Bill's" idea isn't so bad, after all; it is now being seriously considered by the powers that be in the United States. Clarke tells it in a letter he has just sent back from "over there": "In brief," he explains, "my idea is to have each major league club donate a player, which would make sixteen men, their salaries to be paid by an equal contribution from each club. The international league to donate four players under the same conditions and the American Association likewise. That would make twenty-four players for each club. That would be sufficient, as they would not be scheduled daily."

"The players would pay half their traveling and hotel expenses, the Y. M. C. A. the other. I am confident, knowing baseball players as I do, that they would be glad of the opportunity to come. It would be wonderful help to the men who are over here to sacrifice if need be their lives that democracy may live. I am sure it would appeal to all patriotic Americans, and would be a great advertisement for the national game."

Baseball is certainly the popular little game with the A. E. F. in France. For example, the original Y. M. C. A. consisted of 79,680 baseballs and 10,000 bats; 8,000 gloves and 2,000 catchers' mitts. This was in addition to all the other necessary paraphernalia of the game. Of course, other forms of play were not forgotten, for example, the "Y" took along 11,000 footballs of various kinds, 5,000 sets of boxing gloves and 2,400 volley balls.

The sport side of military training is making the fellows forget all about the grim business of war for the moment and the old army veterans now declare they wouldn't think of trying to prepare an army for the trenches without an intensive athletic program.

MORRIS MILLER

It's beginning to look as if Jess Willard and Fred Fulton may not come together in a fight until the fourth of July after all. Minnesota has definitely placed its taboo on the contest, and Minnesota seemed to have the inside track to the affair a fortnight ago. The promoter, however, still holds the signed articles of the two heavies and apparently hasn't given up hopes of staging the contest somewhere, sometime under some conditions.

It has been evident for some time that if a bout is held it will be a ten-rounder. Willard doesn't want a longer bout and he's doing the dictating. Of course, it will be ten rounds to a decision, and the championship will go with the decision.

Which is probably fair enough. Granting that a competent and impartial referee is in the ring the contest would most probably develop into an interesting tussle. There's a question about the short distance between the two fighters. Willard, Fulton, Moran, Morris and Cowler.

With Willard it would be a matter of condition. He is a story, a fighter, willing to wait for openings and take his time. He has any amount of power and strength to take punishment. But if winning depended upon a decision at the end of ten rounds, with both men in condition, Fulton's chances should be good. He fights at a faster clip than Willard and his speed would offset the champion's superior bulk and strength.

Private Alexander needsn't sigh for more worlds to conquer so long as Germany is on the bloody map.

Jim Thorpe, now an outfielder with the Giants, has announced that he will never play another game of football. Jim has been playing the game professionally ever since the A. A. U. declared him a professional some years ago. Last fall he played with an Ohio professional eleven and electrified the fans by his dashing play just as was his wont back in the days when he was the mainstay of the Carlisle college team. Thorpe was probably one of the greatest football players the American game ever knew. He had speed, nerve, smashing power, tackling ability and big idea that now dominates the waking and dreaming hours of William J. Clarke, known as "Bill" Clarke, who had charge of Princeton's baseball team for ten years.

Clarke is at present one of the Y. M. C. A. physical directors with the American Expeditionary Forces in France. As a matter of fact, "Bill's" idea isn't so bad, after all; it is now being seriously considered by the powers that be in the United States. Clarke tells it in a letter he has just sent back from "over there": "In brief," he explains, "my idea is to have each major league club donate a player, which would make sixteen men, their salaries to be paid by an equal contribution from each club. The international league to donate four players under the same conditions and the American Association likewise. That would make twenty-four players for each club. That would be sufficient, as they would not be scheduled daily."

"The players would pay half their traveling and hotel expenses, the Y. M. C. A. the other. I am confident, knowing baseball players as I do, that they would be glad of the opportunity to come. It would be wonderful help to the men who are over here to sacrifice if need be their lives that democracy may live. I am sure it would appeal to all patriotic Americans, and would be a great advertisement for the national game."

When a ball player makes a great play in the field, retiring the third man in an inning he's nearly always the first man up when his side comes to bat.

An infielder makes most of his wild throws when he has a lot of time and holds the ball before letting it go. Outfielders drop two high flys that are right in their hands to one hard throw that they will miss.

An umpire invariably calls a man out who slides to first base on an infield hit.

If Grover Alexander had stuck to the farm he would not have been called in the draft. It seems there were a number of former boys ahead of him, but they were passed because of the need of farm labor and Alex's draft board made up its quota of men not engaged in agricultural work. In Alex's farewell game for the Cubs against the Cardinals was one of the best games of his entire career. Only one of the hostile players was able to connect safely with his delivery, and that was Roger Hornsby, who nipped the speed merchant's slants for two hits.

The Boston Nationals have claimed Pitcher Perry of the Athletics. Boston claims it paid the Atlanta club $1,000 for the pitcher last season and the pitcher has been doing splendidly with the club. Mack says he will not dispute the claim, but he will not dispute the claim of the Athletics to the pitcher. Mack says he will not dispute the claim of the Athletics to the pitcher.

"SAINTS" FOUND AMONG THE U. S. MARINE CORPS

San Francisco, May 14.—The "Saints be praised!" For the "Saints" may preserve us after all. At the Marine Barracks, Mare Island, Cal., five men with saints' names for cognomens are bearing arms and present five good reasons why the Kaiser is in the wrong.

These men are Arthur G. St. James, of Denver; Edward St. Luke, of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Orville St. John, of Seattle, Wash.; Henry St. Peter, of Kansas City, Mo.; and Arthur St. Matthew of Spokane, Wash.

Each of these men is considered a "lucky buck" in the Marine Corps, owing to his name.

Who said anything about shooting cannon balls? I said this gun would shoot around a corner and didn't take her around the corner and didn't she shoot around here?

BANG! WENT $500.00!
